(Reuter's Service)

London, July 26.—The peace conference between the Poles and Russians will begin on July 30th at Baranovitschi, 85 miles southwest of Minsk.

SOVIET ACCEPTS

London, July 26.—The Soviet has notified Great Britain of its acceptance of the suggestion to hold a peace conference in London of Russia and all States bordering on Russian territory; but it insists, first of all, on the surrender of General Wrangel, whose personal safety the Soviet guarantees.

The Soviet protests against "the British action in interrupting the discussion regarding a resumption of trade."

REVAL REFUSAL

This presumably refers to the refusal of the naval commander at Reval to convey the Soviet delegation to England.

The present change of attitude on the part of the Bolsheviks is ascribed to the moderating influence of Lenin and Tchitcherin.

A Russian note, which has been issued, complains of Polish atrocities; "which," the note says, "must be punished." The note indicates the line the Bolsheviks may be expected to take in the forthcoming negotiations with Poland.

"FORCES UNITED"

Warsaw, July 26.—The new Polish Premier has issued a declaration saying:

"All the forces of the nation are united for the defense of our Mother country. It must be understood that we are fighting for our rights.

"The Government, faithful to the Alliance, will do everything in its power to obtain the assistance of the Allies."

BRITAIN RECEIVES

London, July 24.—A Bolshevik wireless message states that Poland's request for peace negotiations has been accepted and that the Soviet commanders have been ordered to arrange a place for negotiations.

A British Government publication, issued tonight, gives the full text of the correspondence with the Soviet Government, ending with the receipt of the Bolshevik reply, consenting to peace negotiations with Poland.

GERMANY INVIOLATE

Berlin, July 24.—M. Kopp, the Soviet representative in Berlin, declared today that the Russians would in no circumstances invade Germany.

BRITISH SUBJECT HELD IN KOREA

Mr. G. L. Shaw, Wellknown Here, Reported Being Held By Japanese Authorities

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, July 26.—Reports from Antung state that a British merchant, Mr. Shaw, on July 11, entered Korea without a passport to meet his family who were returning from Japan. Mr. Shaw traveled 20 miles into Korea. When he was returning he was arrested on the charge of not having in his possession the necessary passport and has since been confined to a Japanese jail, his friends not being permitted to see him.

This action by the Japanese, it is stated, is not in accordance with the procedure, usual in the case of a man being without a passport, and the case bears the complexion of an official kidnapping and holding in custody in order to prefer against the accused charges, connected with occurrences in territory, where British tribunals exist, competent to deal with any alleged misconduct there.

Mr. G. L. Shaw, who is referred to in the above despatch and who long has been known as one of the most influential foreigners in northern China, has important and extensive commercial relations with firms in Shanghai.

Only meagre news of the incident referred to has been received here, but it was known that Mr. Shaw had been taken into custody by Japanese authorities in Korea after he had crossed the Yalu Kiang from Antung. What charges have been made against him or what measures have been taken to effect his release have not yet been disclosed.

Calling Of Constitutional Convention Advocated By Ten Local Organisations

Societies Present Views On Situation In Telegram; Demand Punishment Of Anfu Leaders And Recall Of Monarchist, Chang Hsun

The political views of 10 local organisations were set forth yesterday in a circular telegram to the people of China. A translation of the telegram follows:

"The joint attack made by the Fengtien and Chihli troops against the Anfuites was made following the declaration of the former to bring justice to the people. While the movement has been successful, the President still desires to mediate, thus causing disappointment among the people.

AROUSES ALARM

"Especially exasperating is the report that Chang Hsun, the monarchist, has been re-instated against the popular will. This will not only give the crushed traitors a chance to complain, will also give rise to alarm among the foreigners.

"We, the undersigned, beg leave to present the following views in accordance with the rights conferred on them by the Provisional Constitution:-

"First punishment, with the full rigidity of the law, should be imposed on the ring-leaders of the Anfu Club. Men like Hsu Shu-tseng, Tseng Yu-tsing and others should not be allowed to secure foreign protection and escape the net of justice. The friendly powers should be informed that these criminals are not merely political offenders, but are pirates and robbers and social outcasts, who should not be allowed the privilege of political refugees.

DISARM ANFUS

"Second, all the routed troops of the Anfu Club should be disarmed and repatriated.

"Third, Chang Hsun, being the ring-leader of the notorious monarchial movement in 1917, should not be allowed to be re-instated.

"Fourth, the victorious army should obey the public will and refrain from playing politics or lending foreign assistance for the oppression of the people.

"Fifth, a constitutional convention should at once be organised for the enactment of a contitution based on the will of the people."

LIST OF SIGNERS

The organisations which sent out the circular telegram were the Kiangsu Provincial Educational Association, the Nantao Chamber of Commerce, the Shanghai City Educational Association, the Western Returned Students' Union, the Tungchow, Chungming and Haichow Chamber of Commerce; the China Vocational Educational Association; the Oversea Chinese Union; the World's Chinese Students' Federation; the China Christians' Union; and the Shanghai Fire Fighters' Union.

File Written Replies To Charges Of Gambling At Public Expense

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

The Secretary read the replies to the House. Mr. Shimada, who brought the charges, asked for time carefully to go over the replies before addressing the House.

DROWNED HIM OUT

Mr. Ogawa, the Seiyukai leader, introduced an urgent motion but the Opposition, knowing that the motion was aimed at punishing Mr. Shimada, burst out into uproar, making it impossible for the mover to be heard.

Says The "Worst Time" In Russia Has Now Passed

Dr. Fritdjof Nansen

Dr. Nansen, famous Norwegian Arctic explorer, is head of the Allied Commission investigating affairs in Russia.

(Russia News Agency)

Moscow, July 13.—On July 9 a joint meeting of the Moscow Soviet Trade Unions and factory committees was held in this city. At this meeting the workmen of Moscow heard the reports delivered by Krassin and Nogin upon the results of their negotiations with the British Government. Mr. Kameneff opened the meeting.

Special features were the arrival of a detachment of war prisoners from the Balkans and the presence of Dr. Fritdjof Nansen, one of the most learned men in the world today.

Speaking to the assembly, Dr. Nansen said:

"RUSSIA SUFFERED"

"Europe has gone through very difficult experiences during the last few years, and the greatest share of the hardships has fallen to the lot of Russia. We scientists were extremely grieved, during the war, at the thought that it had a very gloomy and sorrowful future before it."

Dr. Nansen is, however, sure that the trying time has passed. He expressed the hope that the negotiations with England will bring the result desired, and that at last Russia will obtain the peace of which she, as well as all other European countries, stand so much in need.

KRASSIN SPEAKS

Mr. Krassin gave a short history of the trade delegation and declared that when, in January of this year, the Supreme Council—consisting of the Prime Ministers of Europe—understood that it was impossible to destroy and break up the Soviet Government in Russia by armed force, it decided to raise the blockade and renew commercial relations with Russia.

He said that he arrived in London on the 27th of May; and that, within three days, the first official conference with the chief Ministers of the British Cabinet took place, those being present including Lloyd George, Bonar Law, Lord Curzon and Robert Horne.

TALKS WITH PREMIER

Krassin expounded in detail the course of the negotiations with Premier Lloyd George, the results of which had already been published in the Izvestia.

The Premier insisted that a reply be given before the opening of the conference of the Entente representatives at Spa.

An English cruiser was placed at the disposal of Krassin and Nogin, by which they traveled from London to Russia. Krassin's delegation is returning to London in a few days, accompanied by competant representatives of the Commissarist of Foreign Affairs, to conduct political negotiations.

SAYS "REDS" MUST WIN

Krassin concluded his report by stating that, in general, the political situation is becoming more and more favorable, and that success in London is closely connected with successes at the front, achieved by the heroic and indefatigable Soviet army.

"Our army," said M. Krassin, "must, without delay, do away with Wrangel's army and definitely conquer the Poles. This is the only way of obtaining diplomatic success."

WINDS AGAIN FAIL YACHTS; CUP RACE OFF

(Reuter's Service)

Sandy Hook, N.Y., July 26.—The America's Cup race was declared off, owing to lack of wind, neither yacht being able to complete the course within the time limit.

Shamrock was first across the line, taking nearly a minute. This indicated from the start that it would be a long slow race in light air.

Two and a half hours after the start, Resolute was leading Shamrock by three quarters of a mile. There was scarcely a breath of air.

The contest developed into a fight against the 6-hour time limit.

When the race was finally declared off, the two yachts had covered less than half of the first fifteen-mile leg.

WILL TRY AGAIN

Mandate Degrading Chihli Leaders Cancelled By Fresh Order

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, July 26th, (Later).—The Peking Jih Pao and other vernacular newspapers state that Generals Hsu Shu-tseng and Ting Shih-yuan, travelling to Mongolia by aeroplane, were shot down by General Wang Ting-chen's men with an anti-aircraft gun in the Nankou Pass.

The reports add that both were captured. No confirmation of this report can yet be obtained.

It is reported that Chu Shen, the Minister of Justice, and General Wang Shih-tung, the Chief of the General Staff of the North West Frontier Defense Force, were arrested in Peking yesterday.

A mandate is expected to be issued shortly, appointing General Tsao Kun's nominee, Chow Wei-hsien, Director of the Peking-Hankow Railway.

HAMMERING CHANG

The pro-Japanese vernacular papers in Peking are severely criticising General Chang Tso-lin. They contend that it is impossible for the President to gain by the fall of Marshal Tuan Chi-jui and the advent of General Chang Tso-lin as the dominating factor in the Peking political situation.

They say that Hsu Shih-chang's position is now similar to that of the Prince Regent, when he brought Yuan Shih-kai to the capital; inasmuch as the President will henceforth be a complete cipher.

The numerous despatches of General Chang Tso-lin, however, point to his determination to return to Mukden, though many Chinese believe that he will not miss the opportunity to strengthen his authority here, in view of candidacy for the next regular Presidential election.

BY NATHANIEL PEFFER

(Staff Wire to The China Press)

Peking, July 26.—Chang Tso-lin, the wily Mukden Chief, has arrived in Tientsin and is due to arrive in Peking shortly. The political situation is shaping itself gradually.

The troops of General Wu Pei-fu are sent to Shaho, north-west of Peking, thus completing the encircling of the capital.

Little Hsu's troops are being checked.

It is believed that Generals Wu Pei-fu and Chang Tso-lin have arrived at some agreement, the contents of which, further than the demand for the final dismantling of entire Anfu outfit, are unknown.

RESTORE RAILWAYS

Steps are being taken to restore the railway communications.

Consideration for the organisation of a new Cabinet has also begun. Chang Tso-lin wants General Chin Yun-peng to be Premier. The Chihlists prefer to have Wang Shih-chen, while President Hsu Shih-chang desired to have Chow Shu-mou.

It is certain that a wholly new-complexioned Cabinet will be formed, and that the Anfu Parliament will be dissolved.

Some food products have entered the capital, but the gates of the city remain closed tight. The outside of the city is quiet. Most of the reports of looting have proved to be false.

READY FOR CHANG

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, July 26.—The Peking garrison headquarters are being prepared as a temporary residence for General Chang Tso lin.

The two Houses of Parliament met today and considered whether Parliament would voluntarily dissolve. There were 210 members present. The meeting was a stormy one and was adjourned without any result having been reached.

A party of Fengtien troops yesterday searched the Anfu Club headquarters and seized large numbers of documents. They formally took over the Club quarters.

CANCELLED ORDERS

Peking, July 27.—A mandate was issued yesterday evening, cancelling the order to degrade and punish Generals Tsao Kun and Wu Pei-fu, owing to extenuating circumstances conflicting with the previous mandate.

General Tsao Kun is leaving for Tientsin.

Chow Shu-mou has declined the nomination to the Premiership. The recent dismissals of Ministers does not affect the temporary working of the Cabinet, which is constituted as follows: Admiral Sah Chen-ping, Navy; Tien Wen-lieh, Interior and Communications. The remainder are acting Ministers:

Pan Fu, Finance; Cheng Lu, Foreign Affairs; Chiang Tien-to, Commerce; General Lo Kai-pan, War; Fu Yu-fen, Education; and Chang Yi-pang, Justice.

Although the original black-list of Anfu leaders contained the name of Cheng Lu, it appears that the tendency is now to allow him to remain Acting Foreign Minister, in view of the difficulty of securing a competent substitute.

War Notes From Chinese Papers

The Diplomatic Corps has decided not to consider Little Hsu as a political refugee, and has ordered all firms in the Legation Quarters to report on any Chinese who are residing in the quarters.

Gendarmes of the Chihli and Fengtien forces entered Peking on Monday and demanded the handing over of all war criminals. Ting Shih-yuan, head of the Peking Suiyuan Railway, was arrested and conveyed to barracks in a motor car, under armed escorts.

When the Fengtien troops arrived at Nanyuan, they ordered the 9th and 15th divisions to surrender arms and allow themselves to be interned. A certain section refused and the Mukden men fired on it. After a short skirmish all Tuan's forces were interned.

The troops of Lung Chi-kwang at Siaotsan were disarmed and repatriated by orders of the Fengtien tropps. The routed men are sailing for Kwangtung, their home. The personal property of Lung has been confiscated.

Little Hsu, accompanied by Tseng Yu-tsing and a body guard of Frontier Defense Forces, was accosted by General Wang Ting-chen's troops of Charhar and bottled up at Nankou. Fighting still continues.

The entire Northern peace delegation at Shanghai will be re-appointed. General Wang I-tang has had no reports from Shanghai for several days. His allowance is being cut off through the fall of Tseng Yu-tsing, the Minister of Communications.

Tuan Chi-jui and his family are now taking refuge in the Legation quarters.

Before he left Peking, Tseng Yu-tsing destroyed all the important documents of the Ministry of Communications and the Anfu Club.

President Hsu has personally written to Governor Tsao Jui of Chihli to release Fu Liang-tso.

"The district surrounding the Kiangnan Dock and Arsenal is a place where marines and troops are stationed and where important establishments like the Arsenal and Dock are located. Ample protection is given to all the residents.

PERFECTLY SAFE

"Recently, however, certain rumors have been current causing restlessness among the people, who are continuously moving out of the district. Such rumors are insufficient to create a local disturbance.

"Besides instructing the military police to arrest those creating these rumors for punishment with the full rigidity of the law, notice is hereby given that all soldiers and civilians should continue to pursue their occupations peacefully and refuse to believe the malicious reports in order to save themselves from suffering personal damage.

"You should understand that protection of life and property is the function of the official bureaus. If you fail to obey the orders of the authorities and still consent to be misled by undesirables as to create disturbances and unrest, you shall be liable to suitable actions that may be brought against you."

HIS $54 BOILS AWAY

Man Hides Money in Coffee Pot, Then Forgets

CLEVELAND, O.—Eugene Para reported to police Monday night that $54 of his savings which he had hidden in 2 coffee pots in his restaurant, had been stolen. Last night he assured the officers that it was all a mistake.

He explained the money was in a small coffee bag inside the pot. Forgetting the money, he said he placed the pot on a steaming radiator.

The coffee boiled over and with it the $54. "I've found the bag and the money behind the radiator," he said.

THIRD PARTY HAD CHANCE SAYS VISITOR

Should Have Nominated Johnson, McAdoo Or Wood, Says Hunt

EX-GOVERNOR IN CHINA

Former Chief Executive Of Arizona, Billetted To Siam, Talks In Tientsin

(North China Star)

Had the Farmers' Labor Party in America nominated a man with a national reputation—a man like Johnson or Wood or McAdoo—for the presidency it would have stood an excellent chance of winning at the polls next November thereby becoming one of the dominant political factions in the United States.

This view was expressed last night by G. W. P. Hunt, former Governor of Arizona and newly appointed American Minister to Siam, who was recently in Tientsin on his way to Peking. In the capital Mr. Hunt intends conferring with Mr. Charles R. Crane, American Minister to China, before resuming his journey to Bangkok. Mr. Hunt said:

THIRD PARTY'S MISTAKE

"There is not a prohibition issue in America now, because the Eighteenth Constitutional Amendment is a law. But there is a marked prohibition sentiment both for the sale of liquor and against it. The Democrats and Republicans have dodged any plank committing themselves to one side or the other and it was this that paved the way for a third party. But the Farmers Labor Party selected for its presidential nominee a man known only locally in Utah—a Salt Lake lawyer—and it was in their selection that they wrecked their chances. Contending issues in America today are too wide and too various to be entrusted in the hands of a man with local experience only.

WOULD BE WELCOME

"That is why I believe the Republicans and Democrats alike will welcome a third party and as many more as may arise. The more the merrier. The more we have the more assured will be success for the Democrats. But had the third party named Johnson or Wood or McAdoo I believe it would have been swept into the White House.

"Prohibition sentiment, both pro and anti, is very marked at home, just now, but it is my belief that if it ever comes to a vote of the people they will stand out against resumption of the liquor traffic."

GOOD FOR THE PEOPLE

Governor Hunt knows quite a bit about prohibition as it was Arizona that was one of the first States to go dry. "What do you think about it generally?" he was asked. "Well" the Governor replied, as he sipped his cognac. "I think it's a good thing—for the people. It reduces your jail population, makes happier families, reduces State expenses and in generally works out for the benefit of the people."

"But isn't it true" he was asked, "that in Arizona, for example, as your jail expenses were reduced there was an unmistakable jump in taxation?"

"Yes," he replied, "but Arizona is a new state and the higher taxation was due to investments in such things as good roads, bridges, etc. We have more paved roads in Arizona today than you have in all the Far East and the investment is a sound one.

ENGLAND MUST FOLLOW

"Coming back to the prohibition question, an English writer recently ventured the opinion that if America stays dry, it is only a question of time when England will have to go dry. He said such a thing must come because England will have to do it to maintain an equality in man power with America. And I don't care what anyone says, prohibition does increase man power. I can take a drink and handle it but because I can do it doesn't mean that every one can. We've got to make personal sacrifices in order to protect those who may not be as strong as we are."

Governor Hunt is going to Siam with a big ambition to increase trade with America.

AMERICA'S TRADE FUTURE

"Right now," he said, "Siam exports to America little except rice and teakwood. My job is to see that this trade is increased. I'm going to try my utmost to do it and if I fail I'll be the first fellow to know it and I'll quit quick. America has a tremendous trade future in the Orient and is gradually awakening to her opportunities. The best illustration of the fact that she is awake is found in the constantly increasing American population of the cities over here."

Protest Naming Irish In Defining 'Brutal'

Demand In Boston For The Elimination Of A Passage In The Century Dictionary

Boston, June 16.—Edward F. McSweeney, representing the Friends of Irish Freedom, incensed by the Century Dictionary's reference to the Irish in its definition of the word "brutal," today called the attention of the school authorities to the matter with the request that it be eliminated at once so far as school instruction is concerned.

The word "brutal" is found on Page 700 of the dictionary. It is defined as "pertaining to or resembling a brute; brutish, as brutal nature." And then comes the offensive reference to the Irish, taken from Emerson's "English Traits," Page 299, as follows:

"In Irish districts, men deteriorated in size and shape, the nose sank, the gums were exposed, with diminished brain and brutal form."

Commenting on what he termed the insulting reference to the Irish, McSweeney declared that Emerson in his essay was referring to the effect of the brutality of the emissaries of the English Government on the people of Ireland, and that its use in the dictionary in the definition of the word "brutal" was in line with propaganda now being fed to the children of the public schools to discredit the aspirations of an "unconquered race."

Charles S. O'Connor of the Boston School Committee said that he would take steps to have the offensive reference to the Irish removed from the dictionary if the latter is to be continued as a reference book.

"I cannot condemn the dictionary too strongly for the insult contained therein to the race from which I sprang," said O'Connor.

Irish and kindred societies in Boston are up in arms over the matter and intend to back up Mr. McSweeney in his efforts to have State Commissioner of Education Payson Smith urge the publishers of the book to strike out the offending reference in the books used in the schools and colleges of the State.

ITALY NO LONGER DEPENDENT ON GERMAN DYES

Cuts Off Foreign Chemicals and Coloring Materials Worth 1,200,000,000 Lire

EXPORTS TO U. S. A. GROW

While Volume Of Her Imports Shrinks Steadily—Tobacco Big Factor

New York, June 20.—The ability of the Germans to re-establish their practically world-wide control of the dye industry has been a matter of doubt ever since the rapid development of the American dye industry demonstrated that domestic producers could furnish the bulk of the coloring materials required by American textile manufacturers and others. That the Germans are also losing their markets for dyestuffs in other countries is now disclosed by a bulletin just issued by the Italian discount and Trade Company, 399 Broadway, which shows that there has been a decrease of about 1,220,000,000 lire in the importation by Italy of chemicals and dyes. The figures are considered very significant, as they furnish tangible proof of Italy's growing independence in this industry, comments the Italian Discount and Trust Company.

In 1918 Italy's imports of chemical products, medicines, resins and perfumery amounted to 1,854,399,908 lire, and that country's imports of colors, dyeing and tanning materials were, valued at 473,593,800 lire, making a total of 1,212,757,935 lire. The following year these imports amounted respectively to 604,219,400 and 137,422,573, making a total of 741,641,973, and represented a total decrease of 1,212,757,935.

In making the comparisons of Italy's foreign trade for 1918 and 1919, it is pointed out, it should be borne in mind that considerable changes have taken place in the relation of values to quantities. For instance, an increase in value does not necessarily mean an increase in quantity.

Italy's export figures for the years 1918 and 1919 show striking increases in the shipments of cotton, silk, cereals, flour and alimentary pastes. During February Italy sent to the United States merchandise valued at $8,251,000, as compared with $1,803,000 in February, 1919. Her trade betterment is further exemplified by the figures for her imports from the United States, which show that in February, 1919, American exports to Italy amounted to $37,835,000 as against $26,083,000 in February, 1920.

The Italian consumption of tobacco is gradually being increased, and the figures for the last three months of 1919 are about twice as much as those for the same period in 1914. The bulletin further says:

"For the periods named the Kingdom consumed 2,285,000 pounds of cigarettes in 1914, and 4,495,000 pounds in 1919. The manufacture and sale of tobacco in Italy is a Government monopoly. The Government factories take over the entire domestic production of tobacco; furthermore, all tobacco imported is purchased by Government agents in the countries where tobacco is grown, the law saying that no purchases of foreign tobacco shall be made in Italy. The Italian Tobacco Monopoly operates 19 tobacco factories in various cities throughout the Kingdom. In 1915 these factories handled 77,272,445 pounds of tobacco, divided thus: Domestic leaf, 17,445,241 pounds; foreign leaf, 50,078,342 pounds; scrap tobacco, 9,495,244 pounds; miscellaneous, 343,618 pounds.

"While foreign purchases of tobacco have been increasing fast, yet the importation has not been able to keep pace with the consumption, so measures are being taken to stimulate the cultivation of tobacco in Italy this year by offering a substantial increase in the prices.

"Payment for Italian customs normally is made in gold, and when duty is settled in Italian paper an additional 50 percent has been required. By royal decree, effective April 9, this premium has been raised to 100 percent.

"With the signing of the armistice, an Italian law, enacted two years ago, requiring that payment for all Italian exports be made in the currency of the country of destination was no longer strictly enforced. It was never actually repealed, however. Now, with the fall in lira exchange, the Government is again strictly enforcing this law. Payment for Italian exports, therefore, must now be made through the National Institute of Exchange and in the currency of the country of destination, the Italian merchants receiving lire in payment for the exported goods at the rate of exchange fixed by the Institute."

BRITISH ENVOY TO U. S. SEES GREAT CHANGES NEAR

Sir Auckland Geddes, At Princeton, Predicts Upeavals In Europe And Asia

TRACES LATE WAR TO U. S.

Conflict Inevitable Owing To Decline In Food Exports, Due To Population Growth

Princeton, N. J., June 15.—Sir Auckland Campbell Geddes, British Ambassador to the United States, who received the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws at the 173d commencement exercises of Princeton University this morning, later declared his belief, at the alumni luncheon, that the World War was caused, basically, by the shortage of foods throughout the world arising from the depletion of American supplies by increasing population in this country. He pointed out that Germany was especially hard hit by this dearth of food.

Sir Auckland predicted tremendous changes in Europe and Asia, changes which he said would not be without peril to the United States. He urged a closer understanding between this country and Great Britain, and said that civilisation might not survive a rift between the two great Anglo-Saxon nations.

In the course of his address to the alumni the Ambassador said:

"Before the war, vast new forces were visibly moving in Europe. A great expansion of the existing civilisation of Europe had been produced in the hundred years following the industrial revolution. During that time what was begun for the economic point of view, what led to increased wealth, and with increased wealth increased population, was regarded as wholly good in most of the countries in Europe.

TRACES CHANGING PROBLEMS

"Your problem, the problem of America in the first half of the last century, was of course quite different. In the second half it gradually changed its complexion until at the end of the first decade of this century some of your problems were following the track of some of the European problems. As this century opened we had in Europe an order that was obviously nearing its end.

"That order, that social organisation, was built upon an economic fact that there were in North America, either in your territory or in the territory of Canada, large areas of land capable of producing food, either in the form of wheat or in the form of meat, and that food was not wanted for consumption in North America, but was available for easy transport to Europe. And as this century opened your increasing industrial development had produced here a vast increase in population which was beginning to intercept that food, and believe me, I have gone into this thing fairly carefully and I think that it is not very difficult to show that the development of your population here was the principal cause in making the European War inevitable.

"Germany was being forced into a position with rising food costs—look at the change in the price of wheat in the first ten years of this century—Germany was being forced into a position in which she almost had to fight. And now this year you are going to have a comparatively small surplus of food for export produced within your own territory.

NEW SOCIAL VALUES

"With the economic changes that have affected the world there has come another change, much further advanced in Europe than it is here, so far as I have been able to judge. We have got a completely new set of social values coming to be the guides of the young people as they come on. The great accumulations of wealth are, I think, more or less obviously nearing the end of their making, the individually possessed accumulations. The period of the great raids, if one may use that phrase, upon the resources of nature is drawing to its close all the world over. It is not ended, but we are past the top and we have begun to come down the other side.

"We have got in Europe now millions of people who are at this stage—millions of working people who say to themselves: 'What is a life worth that at the end leaves us with nothing achieved except having avoided being starved to death and having produced children who will follow in our path?' That is the great problem that is worrying the minds of millions in Europe. I meet it in England, meet it in Scotland; have met it in France; it is stronger perhaps than anywhere else in Italy, I am told. I have not been there myself since the war. I am told that it is strongest perhaps in Germany, but I can't judge. At all events, this problem is there and is a problem which is worrying and worrying and worrying the minds of people, the very foundations of whose economic existence have been knocked out, partly by the growth of your population, partly by the closure of Russia, partly by the appalling losses of life and treasure during the war. The stage is surely set for great changes.

"What direction the goal will be found in is not easy to say. It would be rash to attempt to prophesy. But we can say this that all the indications point to a period of great change in Europe and in Asia Minor, and I think throughout the whole of Asia. World changes are not going to leave you untouched. Our Chairman said a few moments ago, and said truly that the directing principle in American foreign affairs must be American interests. But you have got people here who will respond to movements originating among their kith and kin three or four thousand miles away. In a time of change like this you cannot escape some of the difficulties; perhaps you will with difficulty escape some of the dangers.

"The British people will escape neither the difficulties nor the dangers of the changes. We know that and we know that everything is going to depend upon the honesty, character and the strength of the leadership, and we believe that the University men because of their possessing trained minds are the men who must provide that leadership. And we realise that from every part of the world we must draw information as to what is going on, as to what experience is teaching, as to what directions movements are being made in, and we want to be allowed to keep in touch with the University men in all the other countries of the world, more especially with you, because of your history, because of the fact that nearly a hundred and fifty years ago at the back of your modern institutions, there is a body of law and customs which is the same body of law and customs which lies back of our modern institutions.

URGES CO-OPERATION

"And we believe that if we are to prevent the great changes which are inevitably going to take place in Europe from boiling up once more into international disturbances, it is necessary that we should have the closest understanding of each other's ideals—ideals and difficulties. There is no doubt that the greatest calamity which could fall upon the world now would be that there should be some rift between the English-speaking peoples. If that great calamity were to fall upon the world, it would be a bold man who would predict that there would be any civilisation left at the end.

"I therefore say to you, and ask you to believe that I say it in all sincerity, that I believe that the future of the world really depends upon the free intercourse of thought and of frank understanding of the American University man's point of views with the British university man's, because if the university men of the countries get together they can provide a leadership for the countries. They can provide the thought, and as a last resort they mould its policies."

"I hope that what I have said about my belief as to coming changes in the world will not appear pessimistic—I am far from pessimistic. I believe that we were running up in Europe against a really bad situation before the war, and though the war was a terrible tragedy in which as yet one can see no good, I believe that it was really inevitable because of the economic position in which Europe found itself, and I believe that out of this turmoil, this seething and bubbling of new thoughts and new ideas we may get something a little sane, a little nobler, perhaps, in our civilisation, and I do hope that the American university men will try to understand the difficulties which face Europe, and that you will be able to guide the thought of this great country during the years which lie ahead, for the guiding of that thought will, I feel quite sure, require much understanding."

Earlier in the day, when receiving his doctor's degree, Sir Auckland discussed what he called "problems of friendship between democracies." In part he said:

"Reports which have no meaning are flashed across the ocean and they are published in the press of the one country or the other as if they were expression of opinion of the people of the countries. In these circumstances, I look forward to future friendship between the nations as one of some uncertainty unless, as I believe, the universities on this side of the Atlantic and the universities on the other side of the Atlantic work so together that they provide a vehicle for carrying the understanding of the one people's ideals to the other.

"And I see today here from this platform the chair of learning draped on the right hand by the Stars and Stripes, on the left hand by the Union Jack, and I believe that there we have a symbol, the only possible symbol of future friendship and union between our countries is that friendship, that understanding, shall be centered upon the seats of learning."

Before the award of diplomas to the undergraduates, Dean West announced and conferred the honorary degrees, as follows:

DOCTOR OF LAWS.

Judge Thomas Griffith Haight, U. S. Circuit Judge for 3d Judicial District.

Calvin Noves Kendall, New Jersey Commissioner of Education.

Raphael Pumpelly, discoverer in many fields, chiefly in Asiatic geology.

John Work Garrett, diplomatist.

Sir Auckland Campbell Geddes, British Ambassador to the United States, "early and eminently honored in the worlds of science, education and public affairs. His career as professor of anatomy clarifying medical subjects by his writings or insisting that his students remember the total human frame when studying its parts, and his swift, cool, far-reaching Scottish thinking, were a prophetic preparation for his achievements in politics and education. A soldier in France, wounded in battle, he rose through the grades to high command, served in the War Office as Director of Recruiting, then as Minister of National Service and latterly as Minister of Reconstruction. Intimately and influentially concerned with the complex transformation through which the British world is passing, he has been helping to guide the troubled 'transition from old to new without catastrophe,' finding in education the powerful agency for establishing a new world ruled, not by violence but by truth. His arrival on our shores, his direct and manly utterances and his plea that the mother and her daughter shall be their best selves forevermore have laid on us an obligation we cannot and would not escape. Too lately have we clasped hands ever to loose them. The toll of the dead is written in Freedom's scroll. The work of the living is 'that these dead shall not have died in vain.'"

Application by 118 Teuton residents in Shanghai for passports to return to their respective motherlands have been granted by the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, according to instructions received at the local Bureau of Foreign Affairs yesterday.

Japanese ships are also shipping German goods to China. Two shipments have already reached the port. The goods include aniline dyes, needles, nails and cigars.

The resumption of the German trade is attracting a great deal of interest among the Chinese importers.

BOLSHEVIKI LOSE SHORTENED GAME

Brief Period Of Sunshine Affords Opportunity For Practice Contest

After a day of showers the weather man finally decided to come through with a few hours of sunshine, and give the Regulars and the Bolsheviki an opportunity for a little practice yesterday afternoon.

The regulars won the abbreviated game by the score 6 to 2.

The weather had been so doubtful up until 4:30 p.m., that some of the players failed to appear. Consequently, there were not enough men for a complete lineup on both teams—coolies playing in the outfield, and the practice game turned out to be nothing more than a few innings of batting practice for the boys.

Today, weather permitting, the game that was announced for Saturday of last week, between the U. S. Destroyer Lee and the Shanghai teams will be played off. The game will be called at 4:30 p.m.

Tomorrow, the U. of C. Glee Club boys, who have returned from their engagement at Nanking, will give the Shanghai Club a run for their money. Time 4:30 p.m.

Mr. Dodge, number one Bolsheviki, is trying to arrange a game for Friday, between his men and the Glee Club boys.

ATHLETES NOT BEST LEADERS

Education Association Is Told Stars Do Not Make Directors

Prof. Elmer Berry, of the International Y. M. C. A. College at Springfield, Mass., told the members of the American Physical Education Association at the Waldorf-Astor that the tendency on the part of schools, colleges and universities to select a man to head the Physical Education Department, merely because he had been a star athlete, resulted nearly always in a mistake. The star athlete, he said, generally had outstanding ability in one field but lacked the general understanding and knowledge of the many essentials in proper training of the young to get the best results. In fact, said Prof. Berry, in most cases such a man would be absolutely detrimental, so far as general education is concerned.

Prof. Berry's remarks were made at the general meeting held in connection with the national convention of the association. Prof. Dudley B. Reed of Chicago presided and the topic assigned to Prof. Berry was "The Recruiting Problem."

SALARIES TOO SMALL

Prof. Berry began by saying that recruiting teachers of physical training was affected, as are all other branches of education, by the fact that men and women thus employed can find more remunerative employment in other lines of business. He spoke of the large number of defections of recent months. The teachers of physical training are engaged in what should be a life vocation, but the salaries are not sufficient in many cases to enable them to continue.

He said many teachers had been driven by need out of the vocation of developing the bodies of the young, having found it impossible to keep their places when better ones are offered them. This, he said, was one of the problems which it was imperative to solve. He said to teach physical education properly requires special training on the part of the teachers, and recruits were not coming in from the various schools in sufficient numbers to meet the needs.

Dr. Snedden, formerly Commissioner of Education for the State of Massachusetts, now President of the National Association for Vocational Training, spoke of the place of physical education in the general scheme of education. He said he believed the system of physical training now in vogue was sound and correct in principle, but all the methods employed should be simplified to gain the best and most permanent results.

KEEP FIT FOR LIFE

Dr. Snedden pointed out that the purpose of such training was not merely to fit the pupils for competition in athletic events, but to keep them fit for life. He expressed the opinion that the present competitive spirit should be replaced by a spirit whose purpose should be to teach the pupils that they would "carry on" during after life.

Golf and similar out of door games and exercises, where available, Dr. Snedden said, have proved valuable for men who are much in office. The sitting position, he said, tends to weaken the long muscles of the legs needed in locomotion. Walking, setting up exercises and similar training indulged in moderately, would do much toward keeping an office man fit and healthy.

The afternoon meeting, presided over by Dr. R. Tait McKenzie, considered industrial physiology and the work of training play leaders for industrial workers.

M'Graw And Matty As They Looked When They Broke In

McGraw, manager and vice-president of the New York National League baseball club, was made thirty years ago, when McGraw, first broke into professional baseball. It is probably the only picture in existence of McGraw taken at that time. Apparently it was in the days when spiked shoes were not yet heard of, for "Little Napoleon" is wearing patent leather oxfords. The picture of Matty is also an old-timer and shows the once great pitcher in his first Giant uniform.

"Baby First" Gets Top Place In Aerial Derby

(Reuter's Service)

London, July 24.—The fifth Aerial Derby was flown this afternoon. The course consists of two circuits round outer London, starting and finishing at Hendon, a distance of 205 miles.

The weather was fine but there was a gusty north wind blowing. Visibility was good.

The pilot Courtney flying the Martinsyde "Semiquaver" won (?) the race, covering the course in one hour, eighteen minutes 12 1-5 seconds, i.e., an average speed of 153½ miles an hour.

In landing the "Semiquaver" turned a complete somersault and dropped on the ground on its back. Courtney crawled out unhurt amid terrific cheering.

The result of the handicap was as follows:

The Drought And Tia Juana

A Picture Of The Wide-Open Boom Town Sixteen Miles South Of San Diego, Cal. Over The Mexican Border

BY STEPHEN CHALMERS

South from San Diego, Cal., there runs a road. It is not a straight road, nor is it narrow. Broad and crooked, it winds a more or less serpentine way to Tia Juana across the international line in old Mexico.

That road, unlike so many other main highways of the Golden State, is not paved. The "unco guid" of San Diego have opposed every measure introduced to that end. Against the paving of that particular road, against smoothing out the ruts in the way of the transgressor, the clergy of Sunshine City have thundered protest, and to that road to Tia Juana the pulpit has given a name which, to the joy of the irreverent and the unregenerate, has stuck—"The Road to Hell!"

And because wickedness has a charm of its own and human nature was not changed by the Volstead act, the autostage companies and livery stables of San Diego and Los Angeles are sowing a whirlwind and reaping a harvest. They do not have to advertise that particular route—all who visit San Diego must "do" Tia Juana.

For at Tia Juana, just sixteen miles from the arid lands, "there ain't no ten commandments." There the weary and law-oppressed may find an oasis in the desert, a place where he may rest his tired foot on a brass rail and drink to the health of Pancho Villa or who ever it was that invented Mexico. And here, in the first flush of liberation from tyrant ukase, he may also toast Mr. Harding and bet half of his roll on Dempsey in the main event, or Toy Maid in the third, and see the race, too, while back East in the City of Dreadful Drought dull eyes may cut all with moisture as they scan "Tia Juana results" and learn that in the feature "Concha saved groggy on the rail and, coming with a grand rush from the very last, won place!"

And then, heavy with lucre, you—freed slave from the bondage of sanctity may adjourn to the "Last Chance" or the "El Dorado," "liquor up" the crowd and, putting too much faith on the red, go back to Soda Fountain County richer—in experience.

When you have bumped sixteen miles over that broad and crooked way of Tia Juana you suddenly come upon a group of shabby buildings near a plain stone monument which marks the line between the United States and Mexico. In these buildings are the United States Customs and the United States Immigration offices. Just over the line there are shabbier buildings, perhaps housing Mexican Customs and Mexican soldiery, but on this particular day these interpreters of Mexican law and order are not visible.

'NARROW IS THE GATE'

You stop your car in a little alley between the Customs and the Immigration—a Tia Juana entrance and exit carefully designed, just wide enough for only one car to pass through at a time. From the immigration officer you receive an identity slip which also warns you that you cannot return after 10 p.m. Some have tried to run the blockade by unofficial routes in the night and have had unpleasant encounter with a woolly western person called "Tex," who packs a six-shooter on each hip and has to run through the barrels and cylinders quite frequently, although at the time of writing he himself is in the hospital.

The Customs does not trouble you as you enter Tia Juana. But on the way back—however!

Just beyond the official buildings and the depot of the recently opened San Diego and Arizona Railroad, the "Road to Hell" encounters the Styx. The Rio Tia Juana is a dark, brown, muddy dribble trying to occupy a bed designed for a manized river. The bridge that crosses it into Mexico is a ricketty, waterworn, wooden thing—a number of low, uneven piles topped with two parallel rows of more or less loose boards set like rails just enough apart to accommodate a more or less standard wheel-width. Crossing this bridge is like what driving an automobile on New York "L" tracks might be, only the holes between are lengthwise. An inch to the left or right and it's literally "all off" in the muddy river. Some say this bridge is retained thus as a check on insobriety in the return trip.

But when you hit the other side and Tia Juana bursts upon the astonished sight you forget that you have to go back over that bridge. You forget everything in amazement at finding yourself in what strikes you at first as a recrudescence of a Bret Harte mining camp or a Wild West main street scene in the movies, with a dash of Coney Island thrown in to remind you that tempus has really fidgeted since the days of '69.

WHAT TIA JUANA IS LIKE

Imagine a wide main street after the old Western style, or the Spanish plasa of colonial pueblos. On either side is a succession of saloons, dance halls, moving picture barns and gambling dens. In other places, not so largely advertised, one may cook a pill or otherwise daily through the lotus hours. The air reeks of dust, warm humanity, toilet perfume, stale tobacco and that curious congenial aroma which makes the camel twitch its nostrils afar. And also the welkin rings and vibrates with the laughter and chatter of abnormal good spirits, the noise of an occasional fracas, the whirl of the roulette wheel, the clatter of the little ball seeking its owner's salvation, the musically liquid swickety-swish-swish of the Great American cocktail, the tap-tap-tap of hammers where new joy palaces are being shot up overnight to accommodate the business of this prohibition boom-town, and above all, a continuous jangle of jazz—the smiting of cymbals, the rancous clatter of cowbells, the frenzied runs and thrills of the automatic piano; and the voice of the saxophone snores in the land.

And the people—ah, the people! —they that dwell in Tia Juana! All nations! But the American, the Mexican, the Chinese and the "colored gen'man from the Souf" predominate. Here and there appears the uniform of the Mexican Federal Army—whose it doesn't matter for the moment—but only here and there. Once they say, they held a military parade. A picture made of it at the time would indicate that Jack Johnson had the honor of being the reviewing "Colonel." This may be a mistake, however. Others say it was Senor Paguiro, an eminent Escamillo from Mexico City, who came and fought bulls in the arena at Tia Juana and had all the local Carmens at his feet.

Tia Juana is apt to strike the newcomer at first as a study in hats, ranging all the way from a masculine affectation of the high-crowned vaquero sombrero to a Parisian capeline in lisere gracing the head of a fair one who says to the croupier, "Gimme twenty in bucks, Jack," or, drifting toward the bar "Mebbe a snifter 'll change muhluck."

THE SIGHTSEER ALSO

But there are others not in keeping with the general kaleidoscopic picture—wide-eyed damsels who, clinging to escorts, have come across the line to "do" Tia Juana. Evelike, one shyly places a dollar (borrowed from her escort, of course) on the even—at the wheel and screams, "Is all that mine?" after the ball drops, and the croupier at the escort and says: "D'yuh ever know it to fail?" And about two hours later that same coy damsel is glued to that same wheel, while her escort anxiously studies his watch and whispers: "Break away, Dearie. You know, when the rush is on we've got to cross that crazy bridge single file at a crawl," and Dearie pleads, "Oh, just once more, I just know I'm going to win next time."

One of the joy palaces in joyous Tia Juana is called the "Main Event." It is Jack Johnson's social headquarters, and more or less the national headquarters of pugilism these days, even as Tia Juana shares with Juarez the honor of being national horse-racing headquarters. Presently Jack will rise from that little table where he sits and, strolling out with the air of a jungle king, go off to the ring where he will punch a bag or somebody for practice and the delectation of such as may to see him "work."

And here in the "Main Event," as at the "Monte Carlo" and other cases, the heterogeneous crowd comes and goes between the track races about which the outside sporting world reads in the late editions.

MOTLEY LINEUP

As preliminary to most things in Tia Juana they line up as of yore, right foot duly advanced upon a brass rail, men and women often shoulder to shoulder, sometimes arms about shoulders. The gent in white duck jacket (a pleasing survival of an ancient habit) gives the mahogany a preliminary wipe, inclines an ear, and lo, the genl in the bottle appears—the amber-hued, or red, or—yes, green—the almost universally forbidden green that takes on an opalescent tint when trapped.

Of course, coming, as you do, from the place where they take the sidewalks in at 9, you do not drink, except, as Ben Gunn remarked to Jim Hawkins, "just a thimbleful for luck, first chance you get." Good stuff, too—without being a connoisseur. The charge is only 35 cents.

The gambling? Every form of it ever invented by man in his vain but still persisting efforts to beat chance at her own game. Even the humble shell-game, playing openly on the sidewalks—that is, any old place where there's parking room—finds "comers" still. For, excepting always the professional gamblers, touts, etc., who make permanent camp at Tia Juana, most people visit the place in the spirit Mr. Barnum discovered and patented. They know they are being humbugged, and like it. They are wise enough sometimes to come with a limit in mind, and prolong the agony of being "trimmed" of that fixed sum as long as possible.

To the seriously minded newcomer it is staggering, however, and intoxicating, this passing recrudescence of wild and woolly '69. It is no place for a St. Anthony, for the wheel and the stacks of bright, new-minted dollars make one dizzy, and the brass rail fascinates by its very shininess. Perhaps one of the worst effects of prohibition is that "over the river" human nature not only kicks over the traces, but smashes the buggy and bolts; for all along the "Road to Hell," as the clergy call it, there are large signs which point at the sinner with a kind of goading insolence and cry:

DO NOT ATTEMPT TO BRING LIQUOR INTO THE UNITED STATES!

and at the border the customs law holds that you may bring back only one package of liquor and that in the form of "personal apparel." Hence the "package" is frequently as much as a single able-bodied man can carry unassisted.

There is, naturally, in a place like Tia Juana the tragedy that ever goes hand in hand with more or less organised license. Occasionally you hear a whisper, but—on with the dance.

TRAGEDY NOT OMITTED

There was some talk around the Custom House as you and I came through. Some misguided youth had literally been broke on the wheel "over the river." He forged a check, hoping to make good on that and recover his previous losses with what he was "sure to win"—one of the original thirteen story situations. He lost again, and, finding himself morally and financially bankrupt, went off into a quiet corner and made a slipknot around his neck with a silk handkerchief. Somebody—another American—found him in time, and with the help of an automobile and a couple of other Americans, smuggled him over the line to the United States Customs office, where they keep a convenient little lock-up in which a paternal Government takes care of the national dignity on occasion.

If you have a liking for the sort of life that once made the Bowery famous you may linger in Tia Juana until 10 p.m. before repassing the gates of respectability on the north side of the river. You may, if your taste runs that way, explore other and more devious channels of Tia Juana life. But along about 5 in the evening there is usually a rush for the line before dark, as that crazy bridge must be negotiated, and one by one the cars are to be halted at the United States Customs for search. As frequently from 500 to 1,000—oh, sometimes more—automobiles from the United States side are parked like a mass of black beetles at Tia Juana, your chances of getting back to San Diego for supper are slim if you do not take time by the forelock.

The return is as interesting as the entry. The immigration officer makes little delay, unless you have lost, or failed to procure on entering, your identification slip. But the customs—

You are halted in that narrow alley which is the only official entry and exit point. You are requested to step out of the car—ladies, too—sometimes ladies in particular. An urbane official, while perhaps smiling at a possible faint exhalation of ambrosia, deftly runs his hands over your clothing, perhaps lifting your hat for you if it happens to have a high crown, while another officer opens up the hood of the car, sounds the radiator, studies the tires, peeps into the horn, removes cushions, investigates the tool box and even examines the spark plugs, sometimes, or peers under the rubber matting in search of opium, some of which occasionally filters into the United States through Mexico.

Then, if your bill is clean, you can go ahead, free to enter a respectable republic, where the demon, buried alive, still turns in his coffin and makes strange noises.

Fear Of Mustapha Kemal

Former Relief Worker In The Near East Ridicules Pretensions Of Turkish Nationalist Movement

BY THEODORE PHOTIADES
(Former Member of the American Relief Committee for the Near East)

The illuminating characterisation of Mustapha Kemal Pasha, the terrorist leader of the Turkish Nationalists, by Sir Philip Gibbs, in The New York Times, brings poignantly to American readers the tragic undercurrent of Old World politics and the suffering among Jews, Armenians and Greeks. These horrors demand relief, and it is being given. But the general and generous public contents itself with its largesse instead of devoting serious thought to the cause of the effects which it so freely tries to "cure."

Charity or, as it is better termed, Samaritanism is essential that the war sufferers of Asia Minor and the Near East be kept alive. But, I ask, after ten months' study of the situation on the ground, is it not prolonging the agony of war sufferers to keep them alive unless we end the war which is still ruthlessly waged against them at this very minute? To bind the wounds of the Near East sufferers, to feed them, to cheer them and to clothe and shelter them for a bit, and then to turn them over again to their merciless enemy, is a crime, not charity.

As The Times correspondent has truthfully said, Constantinople is full of conspirators against the humanitarian efforts of the Allies, and that nearly two years after the surrender of the Turks. The Sultan and his satellites, striving as they have done for decades to deceive the Allies with glib promises and crafty pretensions of conversion, are working hand in glove with Mustapha Kemal Pasha and his bandits, now terrorising Anatolia and moving forward with their pretense of a "holy war."

Your correspondent's statement that "Mustapha Kemal's source of strength is the appeal he makes to Moslem patriotism, which has united Old Turks with Young Turks," is contrary to my observations during my recent travels in Turkey, both in Europe and in Asia Minor, wearing the uniform of an American Commissioner, and armed with the knowledge of Turkish, Arabic and Greek languages, learned because I was born in Constantinople of Greek parents and educated at the American College there.

A great many of the conservative Turks are thoroughly disgusted with the Sultan's rule, for they know its futility and mediaeval deadliness to progress and prosperity. They are willing and eager to co-operate with the business men of modern countries, particularly with Americans, from whom they have gained much and to whom they have given little or nothing. This, too, is true of the business men and property owners of Asia Minor, be they Greek, Jew or Armenian.

A MEETING WITH MUSTAPHA

I met Mustapha Kemal, after many difficulties, at Sivas last October, and studied him thoroughly. He is a squat, swarthy, glib-tongued brigand of unmistakable Tartar extraction. He is surrounded by a crew of rapacious bandits who are the Turkish synonym for Pancho Villa's troops. Wherever he travels he lives in effiminately luxurious surroundings—true to the Turkish character—he eats and drinks of the best while thousands immediately about him are starving. The much-vaunted bravery of his and other Turkish soldiers is really ignorant obedience to orders to spring upon their prey.

The strength of Mustapha Kemal, as it is now measured in European diplomacy, has been entirely created by European stupidity. In 1919 Mustapha Kemal, whose name had seldom been heard in European chancelleries, came into prominence by his brigandage. This was shrewdly characterised by the "Sick Man" and his mouthpieces as a political and semi-religious movement, and the representatives of diplomacy in the Near East believed it.

By August, 1919, he had been recognised as a factor in the Asia Minor problem, and, although busily engaged in robbery and pillage, he interrupted his "religious war" long enough to get into closer communication with the Sultan, and began to take himself seriously. No man was more surprised by his increasing importance in the politics of the world than Mustapha Kemal Pasha. No man had less to do with it than he.

While I was on my way to the Black Sea I was passed by an official entourage—that of the Turkish Minister of War, traveling from Samsoun to Sivas, at the command of Mustapha Kemal, for a secret conference. Between Tokat and Sivas I was held up by Turkish brigands, and as an American citizen in uniform I telegraphed to Mustapha, demanding my release, which was soon obtained. Shortly after that I had another personal meeting with him, and he talked quite freely. When I asked him if he had enough war munitions to conduct his warfare against the Europeans and the Sultan's Government, he laughed and treated me to a personally conducted tour of some of the enormous stores of ammunition, mostly guns and automobiles left by the Germans. This almost a year after the armistice, at which Turkey had agreed to surrender all war supplies.

Mustapha amiably informed me that his supplies had been sent to him from European Turkey for safe keeping. He also informed me that he regretted extremely his failure to kill off all the Christians—Armenians and Greeks—during the World War.

"We shall succeed before we are through, however," he said, consoling himself.

It was not until some time after this that he conceived the idea of a Pan-Islamic movement.

DANGER OF PAN-ISLAMISM

This threat against the power of Great Britain in her Mohammedan possessions seems to have smitten the hearts of allied diplomats until the phantasmagoria of Moslem fanaticism is the bete noir of post-armistice diplomacy.

And yet the unity of Islam is a fiction, a non-existent thing, just as is that between rival nations which profess Christianity, as during the war between the Central Powers (incidentaly united for deadly co-operation with Moslems), and the Allies and their associate, the United States.

If the Moslem world did not rise against the Christians during the height of Central European power in the war, why should this policy be presented to the people of Europe and America as a bugaboo menacing the future peace of the world? If when Belgium and Northern France were completely occupied, Servia and Rumania virtually annihilated, Paris under German artillery fire, the Russian giant in the clutch of the Bolshevist terror, and Italy in the saddest plight of her history—if, then, the Mohammedans under British and French rule did not rise and assert what the Turk called religious and nationalist independence, surely there is no menace at the present hour of victory which should justify bartering with the defeated Moslem Sultan.

Egypt, India, Afghanistan and the Crimea, Morocco and Algeria remained deaf to the passionate commands and pleas emanating from Constantinople. Can it be that the diplomats of this day in June, 1920, can be duped by the menace of ill-trained brigands under Mustapha Kemal or the lip-service of a degenerate old Turk, sitting on his cushions in the Yildiz, at Constantinople?

There cannot be two opinions upon the kind justice which must be mated out to the Turk, both in Europe, and in Asia Minor, where a vast majority are non-Moslems—patient, industrious, long-suffering Greeks, Armenians and Jews. The Turk, after scores of efforts on the part of the Christian world to aid him in reconstruction and the acquiring of civilisation has failed. He wished to fail, and, as Mustapha Kemal Pasha expressed it to me in our meeting, intends a continuance of the slaughter of Christians and Jews as long as he has the opportunity.

Supported by the American people, urged by America's Chief Executive, the diplomats of our associate victors of the war would be stimulated to righteous domination of European and Asiatic Turkey. The power of the Turk would as it should be not only driven across the Bosporus, from Europe, but across Asia Minor, and beyond that final river boundary—the Styx!

SOME SNAPPY NAMES

Speaking of New England names, the genealogical columns of The Transcript are indeed a standing proof that the seventeenth and eighteenth century names possessed much more of snap, flavor and euphony than our twentieth century names possess.

Pick up the genealogical department at random—any day—you will find such fine and resonant names as Betsey Keyes, Patty Holbrook, Susanna Gates, Polly Arnold, Darius Dewey, Prudence Rand, Thankful Sawyer, Thankful Newcomb, Hannah Pike, Deborah Clark, and Jonathan Rich—all of which are from one recent column. It is true that the same column contains names which are not exactly euphonious, and are indeed rather hard nuts to crack; these, for example: Leafy Bullard—a woman; whence the name of Leafy—Hatsel Higgins, Sparrow Higgins, Abigail Nash Rapulah Jewel, and Alcy Lockwood. In the previous number of the same department are found the names Content Brown, Tabitha Heldredge, and Keturah Bassett.

The Nomad once encountered in an old book the name of Camilla Scudder. Was there ever a swifter name than that? And what about the name of Hepsibah Hathaway of New Bedford, found in Emery's book on the Howland Heirs? The Nomad in Boston Transcript.

Picnic Meals

By Mrs. Christine Frederick,
The Distinguished Authority of Household Efficiency.

It has been repeatedly said that man in his evolution retraces his whole history from the time he was a savage. Certain it is that most of us are barbarians at heart, and that especially at certain seasons we revert decidedly to the primeval savage. Perhaps we do this more particularly in Summer, when we are free from many of the restrictions of conventional life and when we have an inward longing to return to childhood joys.

Surely a picnic brings us closer to days of youth than any more formal festivity. Only a few years ago the picnic was confined to the annual Sunday school event, but to-day most of the world goes a-picnicking every week, and sometimes oftener. Only a glance at the shops will convince us that manufacturers have been quick to follow the trend of public taste and to put out goods especially designed to encourage and accommodate the wholesale desire to live and eat outdoors as much as possible.

From the housewife's point of view there is every advantage in the outdoor or al fresco meal. For if there is one way to help make Summer housekeeping easier that way is to eliminate so much table service and model our meals on the picnic or camp idea. If there is any method of stimulating appetite it is by eating outdoors. Any camper will confess that boiled beans or flapjacks partaken of under the pines or with a keen breeze a-going will taste equal to a $5 Delmonico dinner.

The whole point of my sermon this morning is that the outdoor meal should not be looked upon as an occasional or unusual event, but as part of the regular Summer routine, and further, that the housewife should definitely prepare for serving Summer meals in this way.

It is a good plan to decide if meals are to be taken frequently in an outdoor spot near the home or at the end of a more extended trip reached by bicycle or auto. In either case it is best to set aside a "consecrated set" of dishes exclusively for outdoor use, especially when any cooking is done over an open fire. A coffee pot, a skillet or a pot with bail handle are all typical necessities.

For those who can find the location, it is worth while making the investment of a small camp grate. This is a grill or grate of solid wire, resting on four heavier legs, and is sometimes made to fold up to make more convenient carrying. This can easily be taken along and will greatly simplify the heating of foods in the open.

I recall with the keenest zest various "bacon bats" prepared of frankfurters laid on such a grill, and when jucily sizzling caught up between buttered rolls. This, to the accompaniment of hot coffee and a glorious October breeze, formed a repast which would put the average five-course dinner to shame. Indeed, my two oldest children are in a fair way to be average cooks solely on the experience they gain as overseers of "bacon bats" and flapjacks and boiled beans!

However, it may not be the pleasure or convenience of many families to approach even this simple extent of outdoor cooking. They may prefer to use the sandwich type of meals or such as can be carried in a hamper without any further preparation.

Naturally one of the considerations of the outdoor meal is to have the food served cold or hot, as is required. To this end we fortunately have a number of useful devices, such as the thermos jars, bottles and kits, and various refrigerator baskets. A new one has just come to my attention which is worth describing because of its helpful novelty.

It is a basket made of reed lined with zinc. It has two compartments, a large one for food and a smaller one for ice. With this small ice chamber filled the foods in the other compartment are kept delightfully cold, especially since there is space for ice to last about twenty-four hours. The basket is made in various sizes, one style having straps so that it may be fastened to the footboard of an automobile. Such a compartment is tall enough to accommodate bottles of lemonade or anything stronger which the party may be able to procure!

Another interesting kit for motorists is a type of portable stove and food container which may be unfolded and set up anywhere the motorist desires. It looks like a small table of metal with two burners, under which may be set stoves of solid alcohol. The standard or back part, which lifts up, holds various utensils needed in cooking, and an underneath shelf contains the dishes. This combination table-stove-pantry is indeed of great use to those planning long auto trips.

Among other supplies which should be kept plentifully on hand are paper plates, now found in as white and soft a finish as attractive china; paper napkins, which, though they have skyrocketted in price, are, nevertheless, the great necessity; dishes of paper or fibre, and spoons of the same, which eliminate all need of carrying glass or china dishes. There are also paraffin dishes, especially in a small saucer-like shape, which are most useful for the serving of salads and similar foods, since their waterproof coating prevents moisture from making the container "messy."

But what shall I take on a picnic? This is a frequent inquiry. And many people think of a picnic exclusively in terms of hard-boiled eggs and ham sandwiches.

As I have tried to show, with the various possibilities of the outdoor fire or the heat of solid alcohol, one may prepare warm dishes equally as well as in one's own kitchen. But the choice of cold dishes is also wide, beginning with the universal, never-failing salad. There are salads of meat, salads of canned fish, particularly the inexpensive and adaptable tuna fish, as well as shrimp and lobster, mackerel roe, sardine or anchovy. Perhaps no salad will stand repeating so frequently as the humble potato in its different guise, not only masked by mayonnaise, but with a more piquant sauce of vinegar, onions, bacon dice and pickled beets, not forgetting the celestial flavor of whole celery seed!

That housewife to whom outdoor meals are common will become an adept in preparing the right kind of "loaf dishes." Of these there is no end—veal and ham, beef and beans—they form the solid, substantial dish which may be eaten in thin slices and toned up with mayonnaise, catsup or chutney. And in all such dishes the meat-chopper is the housewife's standby, for despite what our commercial firms say it is cheaper to prepare such "loaf" and other picnic delicacies at home.

Summer Beauty Hints

By Lina Cavalieri,
The Most Famous Living Beauty.

"SUMMER is a most pestiferous season," exclaimed a friend of mine who had just returned from a four weeks' stay at the seashore. I gazed at the freckles on her smooth cheeks, marked the too ruddy tint upon her nose and gingerly touched the blisters upon the satin surface of her arms. She winced and held up her hand warningly, indicating they were too painful even for that playful familiarity.

"It is indeed a season of pests," I admitted, but there was no need for you to permit it to become a pestiferous season."

"But how could I help it?" she asked, petulantly pursing her lips and revealing still more the fact that their skin was badly cracked and chafed.

"By that best friend of beauty, prevention," I answered. "If you had patted cold cream into your cheeks and dusted them with rice powder before going out to drive you would not have acquired those unwelcome brown freckle spots.

"Moreover, if you had anointed your lips with glycerine or some other good lotion they would not be cracked."

My friend, the beauty, moaned distressfully.

"If you had rubbed linseed oil and lemon juice on your arms after the garden party the skin would not be peeling off in that disgraceful way."

My friend now turned her back on me and shrugged her right shoulder expressively.

"Cucumber cream would have kept your forehead smooth instead of making it the gathering place of Summer sun frowns," I said, but could not go on, for a sob silenced me. My friend had dissolved in tears and had to be comforted.

"But tell me what to do now," she implored, after I had confessed I was cruel and begged her pardon.

"The arms first," she begged, looking ruefully at the reddened curves.

"Dip a piece of flannel into a bowl in which you have poured: Linseed oil, 2 ounces; lime water, 2 ounces. Wash the inflamed parts of the arms gently with this and then wrap the arms in loose, light bandages of clean linen," I said. Had my friend's hands been sunburned like her arms, I would have advised washing them in the same cooling, healing mixture.

My friend is no longer in her first youth. Though radically beautiful, she has passed the borderline of thirty-five, after which the muscles of the face slowly but inevitably fall.

After the strenuous Summer, in which she had been one of this popular resort's most admired belles, she had noted with chagrin that not only were her cheeks freckled, but that, ever so slightly, her cheeks had begun to sag.

"Brace them," I advised.

"With what?" she queried.

"Ice," I answered, laconically, remembering how the so-called "freezing" process causes first shock to the centres of circulation, then renews and restimulates circulation.

The way to do it is to pass a lump of ice slowly over the cheeks in a rotary motion, with a slight upward pressure. The immediate result will be a fine glow in the cheeks, and the ultimate result a solidifying of the muscles.

My friend completed the list of her woes by showing me her neck, now grown yellow, even underneath the heavy coat of tan, which she had acquired from careless lounging at the beach.

I counselled, as I always do, simple remedies first: Lemon juice, 1 ounce; glycerine, 1 ounce. Sprinkle it freely on the neck and pat it gently in. Be sure not to rub it too vigorously into the skin, for the skin of the neck is very loose and is easily dragged into wrinkles.

For those freckles on her face I recommended this well known remedy: Sulphocarbolate of soda, 50 grains; glycerine, 2 ounces; rosewater, 1 ounce; alcohol, 1 ounce. Should this not prove effective, then she could have tried this simple English paste which I have often used: Oil of almonds, 1 tablespoonful; English mustard, 1 tablespoonful. Sprinkle into this enough lemon juice to make a medium thick paste.

Spread this on the cheeks evenly and smoothly and leave it on until it begins to sting. Then remove it with a soft cloth and pat cold cream into the cheeks to counteract the pain and the redness of the mustard application. Of course, I need hardly tell you that no part of the paste must intrude upon the eyes or eyebrows.

The sun frowns brought on by staring along the white sand can be removed, I told her, by applying bandages made of slices of fresh cucumbers to the forehead. A cooling band of this across the nose would lessen its redness.

White Elephants

To buy food for an elephant requires a lot of money. It is said that the King of Siam sends a white elephant to the courtier whose fortune he wishes to destroy. The courtier dares not dispose of the elephant; so the expression "white elephant" has come to mean something you don't know what to do with.

If you have any "white elephants," THE CHINA PRESS Want Ads will help you sell them.

In the "Exchange and Mart" column, your advertisement will quickly reach the attention of prospective buyers for your discarded articles.

Sungala Rubber Annual Meeting

The fifth annual general meeting of the above company was held yesterday afternoon at the room of the Royal Asiatic Society, Mr. Cecil Holliday, chairman, presiding.

He said: "Gentlemen: The reports and accounts for the year ended March 31, 1920, having been in your hands for some days I will, with your permission, follow the usual custom at this port and take them as read.

"Your directors have again followed their usual policy and have included in the printed report all that they considered it was possible to say about last year's working and therefore I am left with but little fresh to tell you now. Last year at this meeting I had to deplore the fact that the company not only had not made a profit during the year ending March, 31 1919, but had actually incurred a small loss. This year I have the pleasanter task of reporting a moderate profit and this in spite of Exchange having gone against us more than ever. In this connection it is interesting to note that whilst the average price of Rubber in Singapore Dollars advanced approximately 33.11 percent Exchange during the year fell 36½ percent. If you examine the accounts you will see that a main factor in the comparatively satisfactory result attained has been the extreme economy which has characterised the running of the Estate. The estimated output for the year was 150,000 lbs. and the actual output 133,452, so that we have got back to the old position of the actual exceeding the estimated output. This year the estimate is 140,000 lbs. but as this is as much as can be hoped for from the Estate in its present state of development you must not be disappointed if it is not reached. Outputs for the present year so far have been:—

|---|---|
| April | 6035 lbs. |
| May | 8642 lbs. |
| June | 7874 lbs. |

Total 22,551 lbs.

which is of course decidedly disappointing but as the first three months of the year are almost always the poorest we hope the remaining nine months will make up for the bad start.

"In view of the present state of Exchange which is peculiarly favorable for the turning of Taels into Singapore Dollars, your Directors have decided to issue the new Capital authorised at the Extraordinary Meeting on July 5, 1916, and the necessary notices were sent to shareholders under date June 15, 1920, and we hope that you will now all roll up and take the shares to which you are entitled promptly because you must remember the favorable exchange is not certain to continue so that if you wait to the last moment you may find the opportunity has passed and that the interests of the Company which are after all your own interests have suffered in consequence. As your Directors have pointed out over and over again money can be utilised in planting up the Estate in a way which will repay you many times over. Before putting the first resolution, if there is any point that any shareholder would like elucidated I shall be glad to do what I can in that direction."

Hankow Market

Hankow, July 2, 1920.

Finance And Money Market

A very quiet week with few bills offering and no demand for remittance. Taels: Chinese market fell to 96.35 nominal with no business but recovered today to 96.5. Foreign Banks would sell at 96.7 to 96.75. Dollars: With the uncertainty of political affairs here on the 16th and 17th dollars rose to 70-8-71, but fell on the recovery of confidence on the 19th to 70.45-70.65, and close a point lower.

Interest rose on the 14th to 7½ percent and on the 19th to 15 percent and closes at 12½ percent. Changsha Exchange: Nominal.

IMPORTS

There is no change to report in local market conditions, and absolutely nothing doing.

EXPORTS

During the week under review business has been seriously dislocated by the local disturbances, which caused a bad panic amongst the Chinese. Conditions, though improved, are still unsettled, and the prospects for business in the autumn are considerably jeopardised. There have been some large inquires for and sales of wood oil, which closed strong, but apart from these and a few bean sales there is little doing.

The Chinese Army

WHAT becomes of the Chinese troops that are, from time to time, disarmed and disbanded? This at first will strike the average reader somewhat as it would, or did, the old problem: What becomes of all the pins? But there is a good deal to be gained by examination of the question with which our daily discourse is begun.

We read, for instance that Chang Ching-Yao's soldiers, when without rifles, were given $8 or $10, and sent to their homes. If they were still possessed of the rather necessary equipment of a soldier, they were given $30, and sent to their homes. Possession of the rifle brought them $20 extra.

What the ruling price of rifles of defeated soldiers in the Peking District is, we don't know. Figures are not available. But it is likely to be the same as that paid at Hankow. Otherwise the defeated soldiers would object. The victorious generals probably figure that, where a soldier is without his rifle, he has either sold it or hidden it with the dark scheme in mind of becoming a bandit, and therefore the soldier without his gun stands to lose approximately $20.

The idea that lurks back of this $20 bonus for rifles probably is two-fold. The winning general doesn't want the defeated private to join a third faction, and he does want the rifles and ammunition in order to strengthen his own side. There are of course other considerations. When the defeated soldier gets $30 and transportation he has more money than ever before in his life and he thinks the winning general is both rich and liberal. In fact he wouldn't mind joining up with his benefactor. His one idea is to lead the easy life of a Chinese soldier working for a Chinese general who occasionally shows him some real money. What he is fighting for concerns him not. In fact, he prefers not to fight. And he is not particularly smitten with the idea of returning to his home.

Therefore we are forced to the conclusion that the disarmed and disbanded soldier merely joins up with another outfit on the best terms possible, with or without his rifle. All he has to do in order to get another job is to remove the tags which identify him with the Anfu group. This action changes his whole world. He can join the Chihli group, he can join Chang Tso-lin, he can become a bandit or he can go home.

Some wag who had about $20,000,000 he didn't need, or some philanthropist willing to devote a similar sum to a good cause, probably could buy all the rifles in the Chinese army and leave the generals flat.

LINCOLN—OR WILSON?

"Time was his Prime Minister, and we began to think, at one period, that he was his general-in-chief also. At first he was so slow that he tired out all those who see no evidence of progress but in blowing up the engine; then he was so fast that he took the breath away from those who think there is no getting on safely while there is a spark of fire under the boilers.

"God is the only Being who has time enough; but a prudent man who knows how to seize occasion, can commonly make a shift to find as much as he needs. The really efficacious man will also be sure to know when he is NOT ready, and be firm against all persuasion and reproach till he is."

—Lowell on Abraham Lincoln.

MAKE A NOTE OF IT

At the same time it might be useful to remind our readers that both Washington and Queen Anne are really dead, but that William Jennings Bryan still has hopes of one day inhabiting the White House.

ACTORS AND ACTRESSES! TUT, TUT!

Actors use to hoodwink us with the thought that they were very, very very ba-a-a-a-d; and for a time this make believe was so well carried out that the actor was a great attraction. We read stories about his piccadilloes; his adventures in the divorce courts. He was a great advertizer. And so we used to go and buy seats to see him strut and hear him rant.

But now all this shadowy shadow of veiled villainy has been blown away, and we know that the actor in private life is even quite as other men. He studies his part feverishly; he watches the clock; and counts the hours before he will go on. He is nervous, irritable, touchy absurd before the play. After the performance he is apt to be frolicsome—until he thinks of the next night.

IN THE SUMMER

You wake up in the morning and the sun is shining bright,
You sally forth to office in a suit
of spotless white,
And then the clouds foregather,
and you come home wet at night—
In the Summer!

You find the office stuffy, and a fan you haven't got,
You're feeling very thirsty, and you drink an awful lot,
And then you ooze all over, and you're sticky, damp and hot
In the summer!

The ladies dress in flimsy style,
with quite latest hose,
They spend the day in putting on, and taking off, their clothes,
And from a little silver disc put powder on their nose—
In the Summer!

But MASKEE! in the Summer
time, you feel your heart expand,
You sit out in the garden, and you hold a little hand,
And murmur twixt the music:
"O, Mah honey—AIN'T IT

In the Summer!

SWEET ARE THE USES OF ADVERTISEMENT

A Scot and a minister were in a train together traveling through a lovely part of Scotland.

Beautiful scenery—mountains, dales, rivers, and all the glories of nature.

When passing a grand mountain they saw a huge advertisement for So-and-So's whiskey.

The Scot gave a snort of disgust. The minister leant forward and said, "I'm glad to see, sir, that you agree with me, that they should not be allowed to desecrate the beauties of nature by advertisement."

"It's no' that, sir," said the Scot bitterly, "It's rotten whuskey."

A HOME RUNNER

Babe Ruth is some home runner. He has hit thirty-one this the season, but don't you know why? We had the story a day or so ago. Mrs. Babe Ruth said that Babe only lived for two things, one was baseball, the other was his little wife. No wonder he's a home runner.

Exclusion Question In California -:- By Gov. Stephens

[Governor Stephens of California has addressed an important letter on the Japanese exclusion question to Mr. Colby the U. S. Secretary of State, in which he reviews at length the Japanese question in California and demands what virtually amounts to absolute exclusion. The letter is of grave importance in the present crisis, and we reprint it in full.]

I have the honor to transmit herewith the official report prepared and filed with me by the State Board of Control of California on the subject of Oriental immigration, population and land ownership.

The subject is one of such transcendent importance to the people of California, and is so potential with future difficulties between the United States of America and the Oriental countries that I deem it my duty in forwarding the report to outline in brief the history of the development of the Japanese problem in California together with the legislation already enacted and that now pending. In doing so I trust I may be able clearly to lay before you the necessity of action by our Federal Government in the attainment of a permanent solution of this matter.

Race Problem of Past Essentially Chinese

While the report deals with the problem as an entire Asiatic one, the present acute situation is occasioned specifically by the increase in population and land ownership of the Japanese. Forty years ago the California race problem was essentially a Chinese problem. At that time our Japanese population was negligible.

The Chinese immigrants, however, were arriving in such numbers that the people of the entire Pacific Slope became alarmed at a threatened inundation of our white civilisation by this Oriental influx. Popular feeling developed to such a pitch that many unfortunate incidents occurred of grave wrong done to individual Chinese as the result of mob and other illegal violence. Our country became awakened at the growing danger, and Congress passed the Chinese Exclusion Act providing for the exclusion of all Chinese laborers and the registration of all Chinese at that time lawfully within the country. The statute was sufficiently comprehensive effectively to exclude further Chinese immigration and to make difficult, if not impossible, the evasion of the spirit of the act. As a result of this enactment there has been a substantial reduction in the Chinese population of California.

More Serious Problem Faced in Japanese Labor

In the meantime, however, we have been developing an even more serious problem by reason of the influx to our shores of Japanese labor. Twenty years ago our Japanese population was nominal.

Ten years ago the census reports of the United States Government showed a Japanese population in California of 41,356.

A survey and computation recently made by the Board of Control of the State of California indicates that at the present time this Japanese population has been more than doubled—it amounting now to 87,279. The best figures available indicate that our Japanese population comprises between 80 and 85 percent of the total Japanese population of continental United States.

The Japanese in our midst have indicated a strong trend to land ownership and land control, and by their unquestioned industry and application, and by standards and methods that are widely separated from our Occidental standards and methods, both in connection with hours of labor and standards of living, have gradually developed to a control of many of our important agricultural industries.

Indeed at the present time they operate 623,752 acres of the very best lands in California.

The increase in acreage control within the last decade, according to these official figures, has been 412.9 percent.

In productive values—that is to say, in the market value of crops produced by them—our figures show that as against $6,235,856 worth of produce marketed in 1909, the increase has been to $67,145,430 approximately tenfold.

Big Percentage of Crops Controlled by Japanese

More significant than these figures, however, is the demonstrated fact that within the last ten years Japanese agricultural labor has developed to such a degree that at the present time between 80 and 90 percent of most of our vegetable and berry products are those of the Japanese farms. Approximately 80 percent of the tomato crop of the State is produced by Japanese; from 80 to 100 percent of the spinach crop; a greater part of our potato and asparagus crop, and so on. So that it is apparent without much more effective restrictions that in a very short time, historically speaking, the Japanese population within our midst will represent a considerable portion of our entire population, and the Japanese control over certain essential food products will be an absolute one.

Aside from the economic aspect, however, and even more important than this, is the social problem inevitably developing to an acute degree. The figures contained in the report will not be understood in their true significance without the supplementary explanation that these land holdings and land products are in well-defined locations within the State and not spread broadcast.

Japanese Exceed Whites in Many Sections

The Japanese, with his strong social race instinct, acquires his piece of land, and within an incredibly short period of time, large adjoining holdings are occupied by people of his own race. The result is that in many portions of our State we have large colonies of Japanese, the population in many places even exceeding the white population.

These Japanese, by very reason of their use of economic standards, impossible to our white ideals—that is to say, the employment of their wives and their very children in the arduous toil of the soil—are providing crushing competitors to our white rural populations.

The fecundity of the Japanese race far exceeds that of any other people that we have in our midst.

They send their children for short periods of time to our white schools, and in many of the country schools of our State the spectacle is presented of having a few white children acquiring their education in class rooms crowded with Japanese. The deep-seated and often outspoken resentment of our white mothers at this situation can only be appreciated by those people who have struggled with similar problems.

Californians Have Borne Menace Patiently

It is with great pride that I am able to state that the people of California have borne this situation and seen its developing menace with a patience and self restraint beyond all praise. California is proud to proclaim to the nation that despite this social situation her people have been guilty of no excesses and no indignities upon the Japanese within our borders. No outrage, no violence, no insult and no ignominy have been offered to the Japanese people within California.

It is also proper to state that I believe I speak the feelings of our people when I express to you a full recognition of the many admirable qualities of the Japanese people.

We assume no arrogant superiority of race or culture over them. Their literature, their philosophy, and, in recent years, their scientific attainments have gained for them a respect from the white peoples in which we, who know them so well, fully share. We have learned to admire the brilliance of their art and the genius that these people display. We respect their deep philosophy which flows so placidly out of that wonderful past of theirs and which has come down through ages that antedate our Christian era.

Advance of Japan Admired by the World

We join with the entire civilised world in our admiration of the tremendous strides which the Japanese nation itself has made in the last two generations, unparalleled as its career is in the history of nations. We respect the right of the Japanese to their true development and to the attainment of their destiny.

All these matters I am at pains to emphasise so as to convince you, and, through you, the people of our United States that this problem of ours is not an insignificant or temporary one.

It is not factious.

It has no origin in narrow race prejudice or rancor or hostility.

It is, however a solemn problem affecting our entire occidental civilisation. It has nothing to do with any pretensions of race superiority, but has vitally to do with race dissimilarity and unassimilability.

People Determined to Repress Orientals

But with all this, the people of California are determined to repress a developing Japanese community within our midst. They are determined to exhaust every power in their keeping to maintain this State for its own people. This determination is based fundamentally upon the ethonological impossibility of assimilating the Japanese people and the consequential alternative of increasing a population, whose very race isolation must be fraught with the gravest consequences.

California stands as an outpost on the western edge of Occidental civilisation. Her people are the sons or the followers of the Argonauts who wended their way westward over the plains of the Middle West, the Rocky Mountains and the desert; and here they set up their homes and planted their flags; and here, without themselves recognising it at the time, they took the farthest westward step that the white man can take. From our shores roll the waters of the Pacific. From our coast the mind's eye takes its gaze and sees on the other shores of that great ocean the teeming millions of the Orient, with its institutions running their roots into the most venerable antiquity, its own inherited philosophy and standards of life, its own peculiar races and colors.

Pacific Shortly to be Leading Highway

The Pacific, we feel, is shortly to become one of the most important highways of commerce on this earth. Amity and concord and that interchange of material goods as well as ideas, which such facilities offer, will inevitably take place to the benefit of both continents. But that our white stock will readily intermix with the yellow strains of Asia, and that out of this inter-relationship shall be borne a new composite human being, is manifestly impossible.

Singularly enough, while historical facts are not always susceptible of scientific demonstration, it is true, if our study serves us, that the blood fusion of the Occident and the Orient has nowhere ever successfully taken place. Whether the cause be but a social sense of repugnance or whether it be insuperable scientific hindrances, is utterly beside the question. We stand today at this point of western contact with the Orient, just as the Greeks who settled in Asia Minor three thousand years ago stood at its eastern point.

And while Mesopotamia and the country to the east thereof were the highways of intercourse between the Orient of that time and the Occident of that era, and while, historically, there was much of contact and conflict between the types representing the two standards of civilisation, history does not show any material fusion of either blood or idea between these peoples.

Grave Menace of Serious Conflict

California harbors no animosity their nation, California, however, against the Japanese people or does not wish the Japanese people to settle within her borders and to develop a Japanese population within her midst.

California views with alarm the rapid growth of these people within the last decade in population as well as in land control and foresees in the not distant future the gravest menace of serious conflict if this development is not immediately and effectively checked.

Without disparaging these people of just sensibilities, we cannot look for intermarriage or that social inter-relationship which must exist between the citizenry of a contented community.

It may be an exquisite refinement, but we cannot feel contented at our children imbibing their first rudiments of education from the lips of the public school teacher in class-rooms crowded with other children of a different race. They do not and will not associate in that relationship prevalent elsewhere in the public schools of this country. We recognise that this attitude is too deep seated to remove. And we recognise that with this attitude goes the necessity of Japanese isolation and that inevitable feeling which a socially prescribed race always develops.

Hawaii's Mistake Must Be Avoided

California wants peace. But California wants to retain this commonwealth for her own peoples, where they may grow up and develop their own ideals. We are confronted at this time by the problems that have arisen in the Hawaiian Islands, where the Japanese have now developed to an extent which gives them a preponderance, I am informed, in the affairs of that territory. That mistake of Hawaii must not, and California is determined shall not, be repeated here.

This communication and the report accompanying it are prompted by a situation prevailing in California today which we hope may lead to diplomatic correspondence on your part with the Empire of Japan.

In 1913 the Legislature of this State passed a statute forbidding the ownership of agricultural lands by Japanese and limiting their tenure to three year leaseholds. It was the hope at that time that the enactment of this statute might put a stop to the encroachments of the Japanese agriculturalist. This legislation followed some years after a proposed bill by the Legislature providing for separate schools for Japanese students. At the time of the school legislation, however, the appeal on behalf of the United States Government to refrain from enacting such a drastic law was very urgent and was supported by an assurance on the part of the Federal Government that necessary arrangements would be made with Japan stopping the further immigration of Japanese labor.

Failure of Gentlemen's Agreement

These negotiations led to the so-called "Gentlemen's Agreement." There can be no doubt that it was the intent of our Government by this agreement, to prevent the further immigration of Japanese laborers.

Unfortunately, however, the hoped for results have not been attained.

Without imputing to the Japanese Government any direct knowledge on the subject, the statistics clearly show a decided increase in Japanese population since the execution of the so-called "Gentlemen's Agreement." Skilful evasions have been resorted to in various manners. "Picture brides" have been brought in and upon their arrival set to work on the farm lands; relatives of those already here were brought in under the guise of dependents; large numbers have come illegally across the Mexican border.

As to the latter, of course, it is in the nature of things impossible to give official statistics, as those who came in this manner came illicitly. The realisation of this lack of entire good faith on the part of the Japanese led the California Legislature in 1913 to pass the existing law, despite the expostulation of a distinguished predecessor of yours in your present office, who made an official visit to the capitol of this State at that time.

Legal Subterfuges Used To Evade Laws

Again I deplore the necessity of stating that the spirit of the anti-alien land Legislation passed in 1913 has been evaded and broken through by the resort to certain legal subterfuges which have almost frustrated the very purpose of the enactment.

These evasions have been accomplished through the medium of corporations, trustee stock ownership, trustee land ownership and the device of having native infant children of Japanese parentage made grantees of agricultural lands controlled and operated exclusively by their non-eligible parents. At the last session of the legislature held in the spring of 1919, further legislation against the Japanese was proposed. At that time action was deferred mainly upon the advice of Secretary of State Lansing, who cabled from Versailles, explaining to our legislature that in view of the Peace Conference in session, at which Japan was a participant, any Japanese legislation would be unfortunate and strongly implying that it might seriously affect the result of the Peace Conference. Again, California patriotically acceded for the good of the whole country.

U. S. Government Must Handle Problem

I took occasion at the same time to urge the Legislature of California to defer drastic action until the State had acquired reliable information on the subject through the medium of one of its important commissions, the State Board of Control.

My views, as expressed then, and from which I have had no occasion to recede, were that the grave problem could not be effectually dealt with except through the medium of the Federal Government, and action by the Federal Government could only be secured by the presentation of reliable information. I told the people of this State that upon the compilation of the necessary information I should deem it my duty to urge such action by the State and Federal Government as the situation might require and the facts warrant. The accompanying report is the result of a painstaking search for the facts. In its cold, statistical way, it tells graphically our story. The human side is untouched. With the information officially presented to the people of our State, we must seek relief.

Present Race Tangle Unlike Predecessor

In dealing with this problem we cannot very well take precedent out of the experience of the nation with the previous race question, which so bitterly aroused all the sectional feelings of our people and led to the Civil War.

There is one vital difference.

The Japanese, be it said to their credit, are not of servile or docile stock. Proud of their traditions and history, as they justly are, at the extraordinary career of their country, they brook no suggestion of any dominant or superior race. Virile, progressive and aggressive, they have all the race consciousness which is inseparable from race quality.

And it is just because they possess these attributes in such marked degree and feel more keenly the social and race barriers which our people instinctively raise against them that they are driven to that race isolation and, I fear, ultimately will reach that race resentment which portends danger to the peace of our State in the future. In extending to them the just credit which is theirs the thought does not occur to our people, because the Japanese come from a puissant nation, whose achievements on the field have brought it renown, that therefore our attitude should be moulded by pusillanimity or temporary expediency.

California Justified In Stand She Has Taken

We have faith in the willingness and power of our common country to protect its every part from foreign danger.

We also have faith, however, in the intelligence of the Japanese Empire itself to understand our attitude and recognise that it is

Women Delegates Of Indian Lineage

New York, June 18.—Among the women delegates who will go to the Democratic National Convention at San Francisco on June 28 are two from Oklahoma who trace their lineage back to famous Indian chieftains. They are Mrs. Richard L. Fite, of Tahlequah, once one of the capitals of the Five Nations of the Indian Territory, and Mrs. Eugene B. Lawson of Nowata. Oklahoma will send altogether eight women delegates to the convention.

Mrs. Fite is a grandniece of Sequoyah, the inventor of the Cherokee alphabet. Sequoyah is the most distinguished of all the Indians who made the civilised tribes the wonder of all who studied them in the days when the aborigines were a problem to Congress. In addition to maintaining a Legislature of their own, the Cherokees paid much attention to education and supported a male and female seminary, founded more than seventy-five years ago. In this seminary, which bore the title of Cherokee National Female Seminary, in 1880 when she was graduated, the little Indian girl received her education.

A few years later she was married to Dr. Richard L. Fite, a physician from Georgia, and their home The Shadows, near Tahlequah, is one of the principal centers of social life in that part of Oklahoma, for young folks there bring many interests from outside. Three of the sons served in the World War, one going through five battles as a private, and another, who has taken his father's profession, being an Assistant Surgeon in the Navy. A daughter, Catherine, educated in the East, is widely known as a platform entertainer and is popular on Chautauqua circuits.

Mrs. Fite was Chairman of the first Woman's Democratic Club of Oklahoma, and during the war was Chairman for her country in every Liberty loan drive. When the selection of delegates to the Democratic National Convention was made, the State convention gave Senator Owen the privilege of naming half the number. Mrs. Fite's name was on his list, and she was also the choice of the State convention, the only delegate to receive this double honor. For this reason she is considered particularly well fitted to represent Oklahoma. She has been recognised as a strong factor in politics ever since the women of the State have had the franchise. It has been said that her fine intelligence, her party loyalty and her power to present Democratic principles convincingly have done much to convert men who have been strongly opposed to woman suffrage.

The other delegate of Indian descent, Mrs. Eugene E. Lawson, is also well-known in the State. When Oklahoma was Indian Territory, a girl was born in Al-Luwe, the daughter of J. E. Campbell, a Virginian, who had settled in the territory and had married the daughter of the Rev. Charles Journeycake, the last chief of the Delawares. The child, Roberta E. Campbell, was educated by private tutors until she went to college in Missouri. In 1907, Miss Campbell was married to Eugene B. Lawson, an attorney, and now an oil producer of large interests.

Mrs. Lawson was President of the Oklahoma Federation of Women's Clubs in 1917-1919. She served as State Chairman of the Women's Committee, Council of National Defense, from June, 1917. She is a member of the Board of Regents of the Oklahoma College for Women.

Adding To The Morrison Library

(Japan Chronicle)

According to Kokusai, with the object of completing the Morrison Library now belonging to the Iwasakis, the head of the family, who some time ago added some ten thousand books to the works acquired in the library purchase from the late Dr. Morrison, proposes to establish an Oriental Investigation Office. This is said to be with the hope of "completing" the library. The idea of completion in connection with a library is rather novel, and we think Kokusai must be mistaken. Dr. Morrison's object in forming his library was to make a collection of all the books in foreign languages relating to China, even articles in periodicals being included, also such books as the second part of Defoe's "Robinson Crusoe," which deals at some length with China and has aroused speculations as to where Defoe obtained his materials.

It is stated on the same authority that among the works recently added to the library are "The Gospel as Preached in Japan," the "Essence of Christianity," and the "Guide to the Evangelical Movement in Japan." Presumably the two last-named books are modern works and seem scarcely to require mention save as showing that the library is to be extended by comprising books in foreign languages relating to Japan as well as those relating to China. The "Gospel as Preached in Japan" is described as the work of a Spanish Christian missionary, prepared in Japanese with roman letters, and published some 250 years ago in Amakusa in Kyushu. "It is believed," says Kokusai, "that this is the only copy extant in the world now, as the work was suppressed and its further publication forbidden by the Tokugawa Shogunate."

There was very little printing done by the Jesuit missionaries under the Shogunate, as Christianity was already a prescribed religion when Iyeyasu became Shogun on the death of the Taiko Hideyoshi in 1599. Sir Ernest Satow made a careful examination of European libraries, especially those of the religious orders in Rome, Spain, and Portugal, with the object of discovering any of the works reported to be printed by the Jesuits in Japan. As a result of his investigations, he discovered fourteen, the first being a "Compendium of the Acts of the Saints," printed in romanised characters in 1591, and the last a romanised work in Latin, a "Manual for the Administration of the Sacraments," Printed in 1605. Returning to Japan Sir Ernest Satow discovered two more works, one being an abridgement of the Tao-hei-ki, a celebrated historical work of the 14th century, while the second, which belonged to the Marquis Tokugawa, was a duplicate of the "Doctrina Christa," already referred to.

The author speaks of another work dealing with the subject in greater detail, which the catechumen is recommended to study. This may be "The Gospel as Preached in Japan," of which it would be interesting to have the title in Japanese or Portuguese. Sir Ernest Satow points out as an interesting fact that the earliest book printed with movable types in Japan, under purely native management, bore a date corresponding to 1596, while the first book that has been discovered printed in Japan by the Jesuits in romanised Japanese bears the date 1591. "It seems possible, therefore," he says, "that the Japanese may have learnt the advantages from the missionaries, and not from the Koreans," as was previously believed. The building to house the Morrison-Iwasaki Library is now being erected in Tokio, where the magnificent collection will be made available to the general public.

Exclusion Question In California

prompted solely by that inherent desire of every race and type of people to preserve itself. We wish to impress most earnestly upon them the entire absence of every feeling that can betoken ill-will or be in the slightest degree disparaging.

But with the same earnestness we insist, after this careful survey which we have caused to be made, that California is now amply justified in taking every step that will properly reduce this problem, and, where the powers of the State shall fall short, must appeal to the United States Government for that additional action necessary finally to solve this vexing problem.

Initiative Measure Will Go On Ballot

At the present time an initiative measure is being circulated which in all probability will find a place upon our ballot at this coming election. The initiative measure is a land law even more stringent than the present one, in that it not only forbids ownership, but the leasing of lands by the Japanese.

It also makes more drastic the provisions against corporate ownership of land for the purpose of evading the Act.

The measure, if adopted, will exhaust this State's power in dealing with the great race problem. The bill, however, does not and will not—because the State legally cannot—prevent Japanese control of our soil, nor can it stop further immigration. If the measure is adopted inasmuch as it prohibits only the acquisition of interests in real estate, it will not, I fear, forestall the ingenuity of legal counsel in enabling the Japanese to remain in control of their agricultural holdings under various forms of personal employment contracts.

And in this respect I am advised that it is impossible for the State to enact constitutional legislation prohibiting personal employment contracts with Japanese on account of various provisions in our Federal constitution, recent decisions of the United States Supreme Court, and also certain provisions of the treaty between Japan and the United States. This being as far as the State can go, however, it will and should, in my opinion, by an overwhelming majority of the voters enact the proposed initiative legislation.

And, in my opinion, as an expression of protest by Californians, as a declaration for the purpose of this present population of ours to maintain its own standards and ideals, as a plea to the citizens of all the states in the Union, many of whom, because they have no contact with the problem might seem to loop upon it as an unsubstantial one at this time, every voter in this State will and should cast his ballot for the measure.

And for these reasons, expressing both my personal views and, I believe, the views of the overwhelmiag majority of the people of the State of California, I hope for a vote at the November election that will emphasise to the rest of the nation the seriousness of the situation here today.

Colby Urged To Open Question With Japan

So far I have dealt with the subject only within the limits of State power. But as Governor of this State I should feel myself recreant in my duty to its people if I did not, with the present evidence before me, and which I transmit to you, make this solemn appeal to you as the spokesman of our country in its international relationship, to use your good offices with the Empire of Japan that stricter provisions be immediately agreed upon, making impossible any further evasion or violation of the spirit of the existing arrangement.

How these negotiations should be initiated does not lie within my province to suggest.

Indeed, I am confident that with these facts thus officially laid before you, your own good judgment will dictate the next step towards the desired agreement or treaty.

Diplomatic Parley With Tokio Expected

Let me also add that in addition to further diplomatic action, I feel impelled by a sense of duty to lay before you the cause of the State of California at this time. The initiative legislation may possibly lead to diplomatic inquiries and correspondence between yourself and Empire of Japan. Anticipating such a contingency, I am desirous of submitting to you in an official manner this question from the Californian and the American standpoint.

Inasmuch as I am seeking on behalf of the people of California to deal with this problem in a broad and final way, I deem it proper to advise you further that we feel the full solution of this question cannot be had short of an exclusion act passed by Congress.

It is my purpose, after transmitting this report to you, to communicate the information to our various representatives and senators in Congress that they may then be equipped to take up the cause of California and urge the passage of an exclusion act effectively disposing of this difficulty.

Full Exclusion Of Japanese Demanded

The exclusion act should, in my opinion, provide for the full exclusion of all Japanese, saving certain selected classes; it should further provide for the registration of all Japanese lawfully within the United States at the time that the act is passed; and further provide that the burden should be upon every Japanese within this country of proving his right to be here by the production of a certificate of registration. In this manner only do I believe that completely effective remedies can be found.

Japan should not take umbrage at us for adopting these measures. The like strict exclusion is today effective in every one of the British colonies fronting on the Pacific Ocean and having contact with the Japanese, nor has Japan's valiant service in the late war, which she entered originally as an ally of Great Britain, obtained for her people the slightest amelioration of these drastic British Colonial exclusion laws.

The British white races on the Pacific will not tolerate a situation from which we are now suffering.

Why then should we?

Or why should our action seem so much more aggravated than that of Japan's ally, Great Britain?

To Retain Commonwealth For White People

Let me repeat that in submitting this report and transmitting this letter with its recommendations, the people of California only desire to retain the commonwealth of California for its own people; they recognise the impossibility of that peace-producing assimilability which comes only when races are so closely akin that intermarriage within a generation or two obliterates original lines. The thought of such a relationship is impossible to the people of California, just as the thought of intermarriage of whites and black would be impossible to the minds of the leaders of both races in the Southern States, just as the intermarriage of any immigrant African would not be considered by the people of the Eastern States.

California is making this appeal primarily, of course, for herself, but in doing so she feels that the problem is hers solely because of her geographical position on the Pacific slope. She stands as one of the gateways for Oriental immigration into this country. Her people are the first affected, and unless the race ideals and standards are preserved here at the national gateway, the conditions that will follow must soon affect the rest of the continent.

I trust that I have clearly presented the California point of view and that in any correspondence or negotiations with Japan which may ensue as the result of the accompanying report, or any action which the people of the State of California may take thereon, you will understand that it is based entirely on the principle of race self-preservation and the ethnological impossibility of successfully assimilating this constantly increasing flow of Oriental blood.

I have the honor to remain,
Yours very respectfully,
WILLIAM D. STEPHENS,
Governor of California.

Nanking Notes

(China Press Correspondence)

Under the able deanship of Dr. W. T. Tau, the Government Teachers College Summer School has been running on very successfully. Last week college agriculture department held an exhibit which was attended by a considerable number of people.

A series of lecures was given last week by expert men from outside. Dr. Seymour's lecture on public health was most profitable.

Next week there will be two exhibits on sanitation and natural science. The College Summer School students can attend without charge, while outsiders will have to pay four cents for admission.

Drs. Hu Sih and Tau Lien-kung, both of the Peking Government University, will soon come to the College Summer School. They will teach six periods a week instead of three as formerly scheduled. It is also understood that Dr. Tsai Yuen-p'ei, Chancellor of Peking Government University, will lecture to the students in the middle of August.

The foreign community is to be gratified by the coming down of the University of California Glee Club men. They will give a concert at the Teachers College.

The City Y.M.C.A. will have a fete tomorrow evening. Interesting movies will be screened at that time. That will be a means to raise the fund for the public health movement.

A few days ago, Gen. Li Shun proclaimed temporary martial law. He appointed Wang Kweiling, Police Commissioner, the Martial Chief. It is reported that 500 new policemen have been enlisted recently.

The University has some thirty men who this summer will go to America, sixteen of them sailing on s.s. Nanking on August 23, and the others following soon on various boats.

ROME BOYCOTTS PARIS

Women Pledge Themselves to Buy Only Clothes Made in Italy

Rome, June 14.—Huge placards in shops now announce, "Italian goods sold here," while many Italian women are joining leagues the members of which promise to order no more clothes from Paris and to make sure that everything they buy is made in their own country. A well known leader of society says:

"Until I began to consider this subject I never realised how beautiful and artistic were Italian silks and velvets copied from ancient Italian designs, and how unnecessary it was to go further than the factories of Rome, Florence and Milan for all we needed."

Another movement has been started by several newspapers to force down the prices charged in shops, especially for clothing, shoes, hats and linen goods, the adherents of the movement promising to buy nothing not absolutely necessary during a period of at least six months. One of the newspaper appeals reads: "Any one who buys articles not indispensable robs himself and his children. Delayed purchases mean saving money and bringing about the surrender of the greedy speculators who enrich themselves to the injury of consumers."

The shopkeepers retaliate by threatening to buy no more goods, which they say will have the effect of increasing costs, but the movement has already had some effect in moderating prices.
